RELEASE ARCHITECTURE

KEYNOTE SPEAKERS

is a practicing architect and assistant professor for digital fabrication at the ETH Zürich.

CHRISTIAN KEREZ

seeks to enable a new spatial experience that can only be brought about by architecture. An approach essentially apparent/manifest in his project "Incidental Space" for the Swiss Pavillion at the Venice Biennale.

RUY OHTAKE

is one of Brazil's most prolific architects. Heliópolis, the city's largest favela might be the most meaningful project of his career.
